Aurora University presents an opportunity to

What makes a good leader? Do you have a leadership style? How do you communicate to effectively influence others? How are you preparing for future leaderships roles?

The new leadership certificate program at Aurora University, L.E.A.D. (Leadership Education And Development), is designed to address these questions and challenge you to increase your leadership skills. Through the integration of academics and experiential activities, you will have the opportunity to enhance your leadership development — and earn a leadership certificate along the way.

The program is comprised of two tiers: “Emerging Leaders” and “Leadership Practices.” Students are required to attend all educational workshops and obtain a position of leadership or active membership in an on- or off-campus organization by January 15, 2010.

Application materials for the program can be downloaded online at <http://www.aurora.edu/documents/student-life/lead-application.pdf>. The Emerging Leaders deadline for applications is October 31, 2009.
